The leading topic of the week at the ctuts and in society is the rumored engage-ment of Miss Wanamaker to Dr. Ruth of the Navy, though small credence seems to be placed in the report by intimate friends of the young lady. The fact which by some is looked upon as very significant, that Dr. Ruth accompanied Mrs. and Miss Wanamaker to the train upon her departure for Florida, is by no means so conclusive as might ordinarily be supposed. The Doctor has not got it upon his conscience that he ever voluntarily allowed any pretty girl of his acquaintance to make her departure from the city without attending her to the train and waving an adieu from the platform as the car moved out the stathe platform as the car moved out the sta-tion. Moreover on each and every one of these occasions the gallant leader of cotil-lions innumerable, past, present and to come, has gone through the trying ordeals forti-fied with a boutonniere of purple violets, resting odorously against the label of his coat. So indispensible a figure has he become on occasions of fashionable exits from Washington that to only him as the from Washington that to omit him or the violets would render the journey as devoid of incident as a wedding at St. John's in which he failed to appear either as best man

Mrs. Noble, wife of the Secretary of the Mrs. Noble, wife of the Secretary of the Interior, possesses one of the most unique collections of gold enamelled and silver spoons to be found in Washington. These curies are kept in the parlor in an inlaid mahegany table, the top of which is sunk several inches below the outer rim, lined with tufted crimson satin and covered with a plate glass top, which fastens with a spring, the key of which is safely stowed away upstairs. Among the most interestaway upstairs. Among the most interest-ing of the collection is a dull-looking silver speon, the size ordinarily used for soup, notable from the fact that on the handle in spoon, the size ordinarily used for soup, notable from the fact that on the handle in has relief is the baptism of Christ, the Holy Spirit descending from Heaven in the form of a dove as John the Baptist pours a copious draught of water from his band, raised high above the Master. This spoon was procured from an old cathedral in Nuremburg, at which place was also obtained a set of small, delicately shaped teaspoons, with pointed bowls and fine openwork filagree handles. Another curious piece picked up in Moscow is a small vessel—a cross between a spoon and a cupused in the churches of Russia by the nobility for drinking holy water. This is of gold, inlaid with transparent enamel, which on being held up to the light shows the most brilliant coloring. An open-work golden egg, enameled in the same manner, can be taken apart and formed into two egg-cups.

Mr. and Mrs. Bradley Martin of New York will soon leave for another sojourn abroad. A good story told in connection with Mrs. Bradley Martin's well-known fondness for autique hangings and historical tapestries is that shortly after her return from Europe her parlors were filled with these rare and costly things, gathered in the course of extensive travels. One in the course of extensive travels. One morning several friends, women prominent in New York society, called, and while waiting for her made a tour of inspection through the parlors. They halted before an immense old tapestry which had formerly adorned the walls of some old Continental church, and one of them exclaimed, "Well, I declare, Mrs. Martin must have had this made to order for here is her movement. made to order, for here is her monogram worked in it." "Oh, no," hastily responded the other, "don't you see this belonged to the Sherman family, the monogram is I. H. S., Isaac H. Sherman."

The entertalnment given on the evening of the 15th instant by Count and Countess Sponneck to the French Class was in its every appointment one of the most elegant of the season. The collation included every appointment one of the most elegant of the season. The collation included game, terrapin, champagnes, salads and ices. Among the guests asked to meet the class were Sir Julian and Lady Pauncefote, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Herbert, Miss Wilson of New York, Madam de Smirnoff, Mrs. Hobson, General and Mrs. Berdan, Mrs. Field, Miss Condit Smith, Miss Edes, Mr. E. L. Andrews of New York, M. Roustan, Dr. and Madam Guzmau, Major Lottin of the French Legation, Count Sala, the Netherlands Minister and Mr. Morrell. THE AWFUL PORTIERS

A Household Hanging that Keeps Man from Proposing, A few evenings ago, says a writer in the Buffalo Courier, I said to my friend Dareal: "Joseph, why haven't you married?" The question seemed abrupt, I admit, but the moment was most propitious. As we said in the costest correct of the club-room testing a new and recompensing brand of clusts, we talked a while at ramon, and finally we, too, drifted to the subject of marriage in Buffalo. We spoke of the apparent rejuctance of certain voting men in marriage in Buffalo. We spoke of the apparent reluctance of certain young men to do anything but dawlle about the object of their adoration, and when Joseph said, "Do not blame them; perhaps it is not their fault," I put to him the startling question. "Joseph, why don't you marry?" Joseph took several long pulls at his cigar before replying, but finally said, his eyes fixed on the ascending smoke: "If you wish to know what has kept me from matrimony I will tell you. It is the portione." I stared, Joseph went on: "In other words, it is because parlors have no doors—because our modern house is one vast whispering gal-modern house is one vast whispering gal-lery, in which the slightest sound is heard from one end to another. It is years sluce I have felt sure that I was absolutely along with a girl—an environment necessary for sentimental demonstrations. But to par-ficularize. It is not long since I became unusually interested in a young woman of my acquaintance. Perhaps I was in love with her. if not, I know that I night have become so, I paid her rather marked attention for nearly a year, but in my numerous visits to her house there was never an opportunity for anything but the most formal conversation. Usually her father sat in the library across the hall in full hearing—if not in view—of us. No chance to shut a door. At the parlor door—portieres; at the library door—porteres; at the dining-room door—portieres, and never an opportunity for that portieres, and never an opportunity for that sense of private tete-a-tete which gives a man inspiration for sentimental deeds.

"Now, it is my lidea that the time when mutual love is irrst acknowledged should be a supreme moment in life—one to be made the most of, and not to be thrown away by any such insensate proceedings as a proposal by letter, or even to be risked at unprodifficial sensors, when interpretation is not. pitious sensons, when interruption is probable or possible. Therefore, I did not tell my love with papa reading his paper in the adjoining room, or with the servant fumbling at the sideboard in the dining-room, bling at the sideboard in the dining-room, with only a thickness of a curtain between her said us. I did not tell my love while all the doors were wide open and the sisters were active in the upper halls, and I could hear the brother in his room overhead dressing to go out. No: I waited for some moment of assured privacy. It never came." There was a long silence. "Well?" I said at last, "That is all, Last summer the young weman in question made a visit to a provincial town where she could shut the parior door. While there she became engaged, and was married last nuturn."

engaged, and was married last antumn."
"And that is courtship as she is conducted in Buffalo," I sighed. "That is the state of things in nine houses out of ten where I pay social visits," said Joseph Dareal.

And as I recalled the houses of our wedable but unwedded maids I concluded that Joseph was not wrong, and that what is most needed by our young men is not courage, but "a chance."
